SPECIAL MONTAUK ISSUE

CHUMIN SQUID.

TO A FISH, IT'S LIKE PASSING A BAKERY.

Most fish don't see very well. To find food, they depend on their sense of smell. And when they move in close, they feel and taste the bait.

Chumin Squid is the first lure scientifically designed to appeal to the fish's olfactory and gustatory organs. Organs so sensitive that the fish can detect concentrations of one part squid in many billions of parts water.

Chumin Squid leaves its own chum line, leading the fish in close, where it can see the action of the lure.

Where it can strike. It combines the best features of both lures and live bait, because it can be used over and over again and because it feels like bait. Gives off an odor even stronger than real bait.

Chumin Squid has been tested for trolling, casting and jigging. On the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. In the Caribbean and the Gulf of Mexico. It has taken as high as 90% of the fish in four-lure tests.

- Jigging or trolling forces water into tapered ducts.
- Water gradually dissolves freeze-dried squid pellet placed inside the lure.
- Positive pressure inside lure forces squid essence out into the water.
- Concentrated squid forms chum line leading fish directly to the lure.

HOW TO USE TIDE TABLES

To compute the high tide for the area you wish to fish, simply find the closest area on the conversion tables. Add or subtract the hours and/or minutes as indicated from that area's station above. Example: "Shinnecock Inlet -0 50" is listed under "on Sandy Hook". -0 50 means you subtract 50 minutes from the times given for the SANDY HOOK STATION for the day you are going fishing. For low tide, add 6 1/2 hours to this figure.

CLUB NEWS

NORTH BROOKHAVEN SPORT FISHERMEN'S CLUB INC.

Don Meola of Miller Place was the winner in the first "fish-out" of the year held at Brookhaven Town's Cedar Beach in Mt. Sinai on the 5th of May. Don Landed a blackfish with only a few seconds left on the clock.

Members are busy with plans for the Second Annual Club family picnic, to be held sometime in August at one of the county parks in Suffolk. Last year's picnic was held at Indian Island County Park in Riverhead.

Plans are also being worked on for the Second Annual Town of Brookhaven Fishing Contest. The first contest, open to all Town of Brookhaven residents, drew 388 for fishing and another 88 for casting. It took place at Cedar Beach, and will take place at that location again this year. The date for the contest has been set for September 8th, a Sunday. Fishing will start early in the morning and end about 11:00 AM, with all trophies given out at that time. Last year, 20 lucky Brookhaven residents (most of them kids) won giant trophies for their fishing efforts. All Brookhaven Town fishermen are asked to mark off September 8th on their family calendars now, so they can take their kids "fishing" for the day, and possibly bring home a trophy too!

Meetings of the North Brookhaven Sport Fishermen's Club are held the second Monday of each month. The next one will take place on Monday night, the 8th of July, in the Mt. Sinai Community House, located on North Country Road in Mt. Sinai. The 8:00 PM meeting is open to all fishermen of Long Island. Coffee and cake will be served after the meeting. For more information on the N.B.S.F.C., call in the Rocky Point area: 744-6260, and in the Lake Ronkonkoma area, call 588-6080.

MONTAUK MONSTER FISHING

with Capt. Frank Mundus

Capt. Frank Mundus, skipper of the Cricket II out of Montauk, has achieved recognition for "monster fishing" in big game fishing circles around the world. He was the innovator of sport fishing for sharks on Long Island, when he first went after these monsters as a joke in 1951, and saw it quickly catch on to the point where he has had photo essays about his craft in Life Magazine and feature articles in many fishing-oriented magazines in the country.

In the last twenty-four years more than twenty IGFA World Record Marine Fish have been boated on the Cricket II, many times breaking records it had previously set. Capt. Mundus has co-authored with Bill Wisner a book entitled "Sport Fishing for Sharks", which should be on the "must read" list of all fishermen interested in "monster" fishing.

It is my belief most big game fish are caught in offshore waters by chumming. We have ladled a lot of chum over the side of the Cricket II, and we've found this to be much more productive than running around the ocean looking for fish. There are some fish such as the white marlin, bonito, school tuna and swordfish that are caught trolling, but the majority of big game fish are caught chumming.

For instance, if you have giant tuna on your mind and you go out chumming, you could raise sharks. And if you went out chumming for sharks you could raise giant tuna, or swordfish, or white marlin, or school tuna, or bluefish, or mackerel, or anything else that comes along. So chumming is your best bet, no matter how you look at it.

We've had a lot of crazy days on the Cricket II, like when a party wanted us to go for sharks and we unexpectedly hooked into a giant tuna. So we had to go chasing him all around because we were using light tackle for sharks. But if you put out a 12/0 reel with 130-lb. test line and hook into a shark or a white marlin, you'll just wind him up to the boat without any sport or fun. What you have to do is balance your tackle with the fish and the experience of the angler.

This is often difficult offshore because you never know what kind of fish you're going to raise. The best thing you can do is wait until you see the fish. Hold your baits in the boat, rigged up on two outfits—a 4/0 or 6/0 reel with 50 lb. test for marlin or sharks, and a 9/0 with 80 lb. test or a 12/0 with 130 lb. test for giant tuna or swordfish. Then when you see a fish swimming in your chum slick, feed him the rig that fits him best.

But this can backfire occasionally. Last year we were fishing for giant tuna and saw a blue shark swimming up the slick. We put our light 50-lb. test outfit out. The blue shark disappeared, then suddenly the bait was taken by a fish. We knew what we had the second it hit—a giant tuna. It took us over three hours to bring this 500 pound tuna to gaff on the light tackle. But those are the chances you have to take when big game fishing.

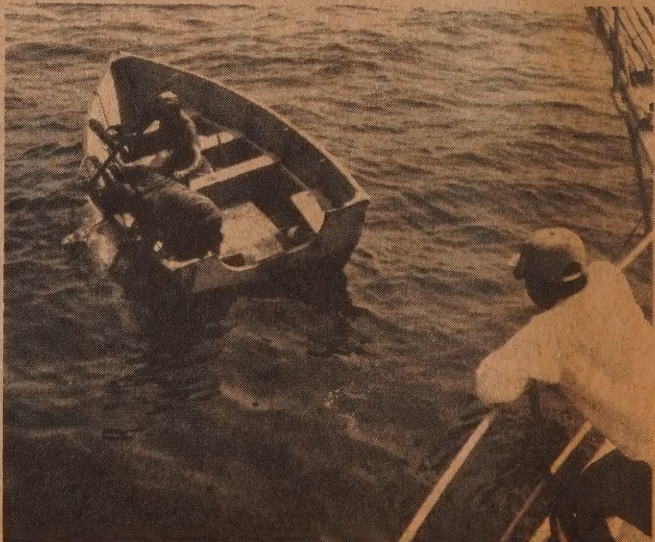

A few years ago, when there were a lot of white marlin around, we had as many as five swimming around the boat in our chum slick at the same time. We were feeding them pieces of shark skin cut from a shark we had taken the day before. The shark had been cut up into steaks for the party to take home for food.

Anyway, the marlin were eating and swallowing the shark

Harry Hoffman holds the rod and Capt. Mundus mans the oars as a giant bluefin tuna tows their small skiff. Notice the wake the boat is leaving...

Harry and Frank gaff the 528 pound giant as a crew member of the Cricket II watches from the pulpit.

"I Fish a FirebackTM Bump 'N' Grind[®]

deep.....ly!"

Successful big fish fishermen around the world have one thing in common - they've learned to fish deep.

Gudebrod's Bump 'N' Grind is a slow-speed casting and trolling lure designed to dive down to the lunker's lair. It floats at rest and travels an almost straight downward path upon retrieve. The longer the line, the deeper it dives and does so with a tantalizing shimmying action well worthy of its name. The wide lip is designed to trip over obstructions on the bottom.

New fluorescent "Fireback" colors because salt water fish really smash 'em.

Gudebrod's Bump 'N' Grind is the name of the lure, an old favorite for many years.

FIREBACK is the name of our three new attractor bait finishes and they really are bright. It's the back that's hot in color, the sides have a true-to-life scale finish. Those scales are angled to cause light to reflect in many directions and are molded deep inside to insure long lasting gloss and offer protection against plug demolishing teeth.

3 sizes, 3 wild colors for blues, stripers, kings, albacore, you name it

Gudebrod's Bump 'N' Grind is available in 1/8 oz., 1/2 oz. and 1 1/8 oz. in the new Fireback colors of - get this now - Fiery Red, Super Orange and Wild Chartreuse. Matching fluorescent vinyl skirts available on two models and you know how deadly they are. This means you can troll that popular skirt you've enjoyed for years down deep where the fish are. The Bump 'N' Grind is also available in eight normal fish catching colors but it is easy to see that deep fish fishing will never be the same again.

skin. People think that they have to give a white marlin or swordfish a special bait, but they don't. We've caught swordfish while shark fishing on such crazy things as a rotten, soft lobster that I dug out of the garbage at Gosman's Restaurant. We caught another swordfish on a strip of white marlin meat. Some people will spend a half hour rigging up a bait, but if a fish is hungry he'll gobble it right up no matter what it looks like. It's when he's not really hungry that a well-rigged bait is necessary to entice him to eat.

Sharks can be just as fussy eaters as tune, marlin or swordfish. Sometimes it's hard to get them to eat. They'll come up in your chum slick and swim around looking at you, and you'll throw them all kinds of bait that they'll just ignore. When this happens, put TWO baits on the hook—like mackerel and squid, or any other two kinds you have on hand. We call this, "ham'n eggs", and most of the time it does the trick.

I've seen giant tuna do things that also shatter the theory of "just-so" baits. A few years ago, when we were getting a lot of giant tuna at Montauk, there was a little private boat puttering around out there by himself. He was trolling a couple of feathers with a large teaser in between them. A teaser is a piece of wood with a concave head that is pulled behind the boat to create a lot of surface disturbance that often attracts curious fish.

So he was dragging this teaser behind his boat, when all of a sudden he hears this one hell of a racket. It sounded like he was hit by lightning. He spun around just in time to see the cleat that the teaser was tied onto with $\frac{1}{4}$ " nylon, and the planking it was bolted to, ripped right off the transom and go flying through the air! Obviously, a giant tuna had spotted the teaser and decided he WANTED it! Needless to say, the angler came running home with his tail between his legs and is now an avid flounder fisherman. We put a lot of stories like this in the book I wrote with Bill Wisner, "Sportfishing for Sharks," published by Macmillan.

The bait used for big game fishing is often dictated by availability. The best bait you can use for any big game fish is a live whiting. Period. You can catch them on the bottom in deep water, but make sure that you pull them up slowly. If you pull him up too fast he'll get the bends and quickly die. Hook a live whiting or any live bait fish just ahead of the dorsal fin, being careful not to imbed the hook too deeply and injuring the fish. Live bait is preferred over dead at all times. Squid, mackerel, herring, whiting—just about anything you catch on the bottom offshore will work when the fish are hungry.

One trick for big game fish that not many people know is to use a rusty hook. Do not use a shiny hook right out of the store. If you do it will only shy the fish away. You can make your hooks rusty overnight by putting them in a coffee can with battery acid or bleach. Painting them brown doesn't work as well.

Once you have your live bait and the chum slick going well, you can put out your lines. Put the first one out a short distance from the boat, with a cork or balloon about three fathoms of line above your swivel. This is the one good place to put your live bait. The other two lines, with dead baits, can be put out at greater depths in a staggered effect. This allows you to fish different levels for fish cruising up your chum slick. As soon as you get a hit, pull the other lines in, in a hurry. If you don't, and if the fish is a shark he will often grab two or even three baits before you know what happened.

This fishing is strictly confined to larger boats, so small outboards under twenty feet should stay inshore. Not only can the weather be dangerous, but you never know what kind of monster you're going to chum up out there. Giant tuna, swordfish and sharks can all be a dangerous threat to a small boat. Last year we had a white shark come up to the Cricket II in the middle of the night. We didn't want to bait him in the dark, but wanted to hold him to the boat until daylight and, therefore, hung a few blue sharks over the side. He promptly chomped them in half. We baited the shark the next morning and he weighed in at 1,045 lbs. dockside. What could a small boat do against this power if it was used in an unfriendly way? So far we have brought back six white sharks over 1000 lbs. (We don't count them as large if they don't go over 1000 lb.) The largest was 4500 pounds.

The only exception to this rule is for a small boat to go out with a larger craft that can stand by for an emergency. A couple of years ago Harry Hoffman chartered the Cricket II for giant tuna. We towed out a 14 foot rowboat with us, and caught a 528 pound giant tuna from start to finish from it. We baited, hooked, played and brought to gaff this tuna from the rowboat. No engine, either, just oars to chase him down. Needless to say, the Cricket II was standing by during the entire episode.

The best chum that we have found is the pilot whale, which we used to harpoon and grind up ourselves. But now they are protected by International Law, so we use whatever is available—bunker, mackerel, herring, all do the job. One excellent chum we accidentally discovered is conger eels, which seem to be especially attractive to swordfish. The average guy will usually have his choice of chum limited by the availability of what he can buy—usually bunker, an old standby which is always good.

When chumming for big game fish offshore you have to strike a happy medium with the amount of chum doled out into the water. Over-chumming, however, is not as critical as it is when chumming for smaller species such as bluefish and mackerel. But if you do see a shark or billfish finning far out in the chum slick, you have to lighten up on the chum to draw him closer to the boat. The most important thing to remember when chumming is to keep your chum slick steady, without any gaps. The guy that chumming should concentrate on chumming alone, and not be fishing on the side.

The big game fish season starts at Montauk during the first full moon in May when the porbeagle sharks move in. They are a cold water fish on the move, and only hang around for a few weeks until the first of June, when the blue sharks usually show up. By late June or early July the water has warmed up enough for the mako sharks to make their appearance. The best time for white sharks is during June, when they are around.

During the month of July fishing is focused on the blue and mako sharks. August sees the brown shark, thresher shark, swordfish, white marlin, school and giant tuna move in, providing a good mixed bag well into September. August and September are generally your best months for big game fishing at Montauk.

United States To 200 miles, Held at Islip Town Hall, June 7, 1974

Many political leaders were present at Islip Town Hall to offer support for legislation now pending before the House of Representatives subcommittee of Fisheries and Wildlife, Conservation and the Environment which would extend the exclusive fisheries zone of the United States to 200 miles. Congressmen John M. Murphy and James R. Grover, members of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries committee, conducted the public hearing.

Among those offering statements of support were Senator James Buckley and congressmen Otis Pike, Norman Lent, Angelo Roncallo, as well as numerous local and state officials. Several private groups were represented including The Bay Shore Tuna Club, Squaw Island Fishing Club, The National Party Boat Owners Alliance, and The Montauk Boatmen's Association.

Al Ristori chairman, Emergency Committee to Save America's Marine Resources, as well as other environmental groups pointed out that 1½ billion dollars are spent each year by 10 million marine sport fishermen and that many of the species that they seek have become scarce.

Although there is opposition from Pacific and Gulf coast fishermen the major opposition comes from the executive branch of the Federal Government. The State Department would prefer to reach a fisheries agreement with eastern block nations (mainly U.S.S.R.) through diplomatic channels. However, the Honorable Norman Lent suggested that 10 years of unsuccessful diplomatic effort was enough and that congressional action was now in order.

Legislation for the 200 mile limit needs the support of all concerned citizens and we urge you to write your elected representatives today. Remember that passage of proposed legislation is not the final victory. Additional congressional work will be required to appropriate funds to the Coast Guard for enforcement of the exclusive fisheries zone. Your continued support is urgently required.

An Interview with

Johnny Kronuch

John Kronuch, owner and proprietor of Johnny's Tackle in Montauk, has been fishing the surf of Montauk since 1936. His expertise is confirmed by his nickname "Mr. Surf", bestowed on him by admiring fellow-surfmen. Unlike many secretive men-of-the-surf, Johnny will often tell a stranger who walks into Johnny's Tackle, "Grab your rod, the blues are on the beach right behind the dunes!"

L.I.F.: What times of year are best for blues and bass in the surf at Montauk?

Johnny: Well, bass are here year after year, some years much more plentiful than others. We generally get a good run of big bass on the beach around the 15th of June that lasts from ten to fourteen days. You can almost set a watch on them. That's the migration of fish that comes from Jersey and runs along the south shore of the Island, around the point and on up north. These fish are all fifteen pounds and up and the bulk of them are caught at night. This is unfortunate because many of the fishermen fishing that time of year are tourists, who do most of their fishing in the daytime.

These spring fish are all taken on the south side, not around the Point, North Bar, Jones Reef, etc. This is because these fish are following the shoreline, moving east. Now, when they reach the Point, the current they are following swerves out, taking the bass with it and away from the beach. This is when the charter boats clean up on them by trolling the Elbow and Pollack Rip. The surfmen fishing from the North Bar to the lighthouse don't get into these fish. The smart operators fish the southside beaches at night. The prime areas are the sand beaches from Ditch Plains west to the camping area at Hither Hills State Park.

L.I.F.: What about school bass?

Johnny: Well—the school bass move in around the first or second week in May, but the weather is usually so bad that it's rough fishing for them. When anybody calls us around that time of year we tell them to fish locally because they'll get more school bass where they are than by making a trip to Montauk and getting blown out.

L.I.F.: When does the fall run of striped bass start at Montauk?

Johnny: That's hard. It generally runs from the last two weeks in September, on. It depends on the water temperature and weather conditions a lot. If it's a mild fall it doesn't help, because the milder it is the longer it will take for the bass to start moving down.

L.I.F.: What about the summer months?

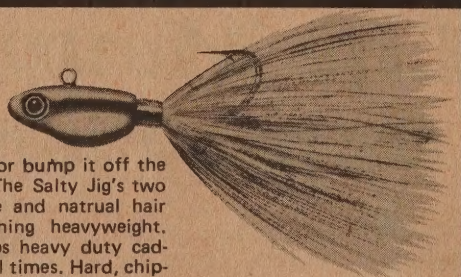

Johnny: The summer months are really tough, because the fish are out in deep water. You'll get a guy coming in now and then weighing in fish, but it's not what I call fishing, not for the percentage of lines out there.

L.I.F.: What about bluefish?

Johnny: We get our share of bluefish from the beach at sunset and night plugging, but that is primarily from the lighthouse to the North Bar. We also get some large weakfish, but nothing to speak of. When a guy gets one it's considered odd. Years ago, in the thirties, we used to get a lot. But this year it might be different, judging by the amount and size of the weakfish that are hitting in Peconics. We might go back to catching weakfish like we did in '36, '37 and '38.

L.I.F.: What about surf casting for bottom species at Montauk?

Johnny: We get blackfish around the rocky areas and fluke off Gin Beach. We get a lot of guys who are getting on in years or who just want to hold a rod and wet a line and there's always plenty of action for them.

L.I.F.: Can you give us a breakdown on what areas to fish the surf?

Johnny: If you could tell me what the fish are feeding on—sand eels, spearing, or mullet—then I could tell you where to fish for them. The bait fish prefer different areas, and the blues and bass will go to them. Sand eels are found along the sandy beaches of the southside, and when the fish are feeding on sand eels the surfmen do good there. Nobody can actually pinpoint an area for you.

L.I.F.: What are some of the more popular places for surfcasters?

Johnny: On the north side of the light you have the North Bar, Jones' Reef, Scott's Hole and Shagwong Reef. On the south side of the light you have Ditch Plains, Sand Beach in front of the town and Hither Hills State Park.

L.I.F.: What are the best tides to fish?

Johnny: You fish on North Bar on outgoing water, under the Light on incoming water, you fish on Jones' Reef on incoming or outgoing. Along the sand beaches of the south side the top of the flood is the best. Along the rocky parts of the shore low tide is best because you can wade out onto the rocks and cast your plug into deep water.

L.I.F.: What kind of tackle do you recommend for fishing the surf at Montauk?

Johnny: Just use the surf outfit you feel most comfortable with, the one you use most often. As far as lures go, just use your favorite plugs, jigs or rigged eels.

L.I.F.: If a pilgrim is planning a trip to Montauk and wants to know where it's happening and at what time, who should he call?

Johnny: They can call me at Johnny's Tackle, telephone (516) 668-2940. We don't mind. What the hell, we don't want to bring people out if there's no fish.

L.I.F.: Do you have any special advice or words of wisdom you would like to add for our readers that you feel would make their trip to Montauk more productive and more enjoyable?

Johnny: I think that where these guys make their mistake is that up until October the bulk of the big fish that are caught are caught at NIGHT—and I emphasize that, it's very important. You can put that in bold, black type. Your bass will come in out of deep water to feed at night. I don't care if you're fishing Jersey, Rhode Island or Massachusetts—Night is always your best time for striped bass.

L.I.F.: Thank you, Mr. President.

The RIPS OF MONTAUK: Doormats to Paradise

by Scott Simons

Our small seventeen foot boat hung silently in the glass-like water as we quickly lowered our baited hooks to the bottom. We were drifting at a brisk pace to our target fifty yards before us: one of the numerous white water rips of Montauk that attract doormat class fluke in great numbers.

The boat had barely edged its way into the rip when Frank announced, "I've got one playing with me." Experience had shown us that these fluke had a tendency to grab the bait and just hold it for anywhere from ten to thirty seconds before trying to swallow it. After waiting a good fifteen seconds or so, Frank slowly raised his rod tip until the weight of the fish showed in the bend of his rod, and set the hook. "I'm in," Frank said calmly, and began to work the fish to the surface.

Meanwhile, my bait had gone untouched. Since we were now well past the white water of the rip, I relaxed as I waited for Frank to net the nice four-pounder he had brought to the surface so we could run back to start another drift. I propped my rod up against the gunwale of the boat so that I could take care of an imminently important chore. While so engaged, I was congratulating Frank on the large fluke he had just landed when suddenly my rod bowed double, catching me in somewhat of an awkward predicament. Dedicated fisherman that I am, I abandoned my task in mid-stream, grabbed my rod and set the hook.

I was into a big fish...very big. With great effort I worked the fish four or five feet off the bottom, only to have him make a quick surge back down again. "Must be one of those big sand sharks like last week," Frank observed. Agreeing, I threw caution to the wind and began to horse the dogfish slowly to the surface. Meanwhile, Frank tied into a second fluke just as my fish slowly took shape from out of the depths.

"Holy S#!?! It's a FLUKE!!!" I screamed as the largest fluke I have seen in my life came into view. Frank was busy with his fish and couldn't help with the net, so with my heart in my throat I awkwardly netted the doormat one-handed and lifted him into the boat.

Back at the dock that afternoon, my first fish of the day tipped the scale at twelve-and-a-half pounds. It turned out to be the largest fluke we were to take in six days of fishing one tide daily. Frank and I boated a great many fluke; of these, better than fifty per cent were over four pounds in weight. Fish of two pounds, normally a nice fish if you're fishing in the bay, were a rarity and considered small, while fluke of six and seven pounds were commonplace. This gives you an idea of the caliber of the fluke fishing you'll find in the rips of

There are quite a few of these rips, which are caused when the current comes across a piece of bottom that comes up suddenly. The water piles up as it goes over these humps, causing a visible white water rip on the surface. I don't know exactly how many of these rips there are, but I have personally drifted over five in succession in less than a half mile, picking fluke from each one. And these are in addition to the main Pollock Rip at the Point.

The fluke are attracted to these rips because the strong turbulence renders small baitfish helpless. The fluke lie facing upcurrent along the edge of the rip, patiently waiting for the helpless bait fish to be swept within their reach. When the tide slackens, this turbulence abates and the fluke stop feeding. When the tide again begins moving, the fluke move to the opposite side of the rip and face the new direction of the current. For this reason, the vast majority of fluke caught will be taken in a narrow feeding zone about fifty feet down-current of the rip, although you will take an occasional fish on either side of the zone.

Fluke make their first appearance in the rips during the latter part of June and remain until August. Toward the end of that month they leave the rips and school in the deep water on the south side of the point. They feed heavily at this time, prior to their migration, providing excellent fishing for fluke of mammoth proportions. During this period last year, the largest fluke of the season to be caught at Montauk was a 19½ pound doormat caught aboard the "Capt. Spider".

Locating the rips at Montauk is easy, since you can sight them visually and don't need the aid of a depth recorder. As you leave the jetties of Lake Montauk, immediately steer a course east-northeast for Shagwong Point. After passing the buoy marking the point, run about a mile out, then turn and run parallel with the shoreline towards Montauk Lighthouse. This course will take your boat across the rips at a right angle. Keep your eyes peeled for white water on the surface in front of you. Occasionally take a look off your stern—sometimes the rips can only be seen when approached from one direction and you will over-shoot them.

There are two times that you will have difficulty seeing the rips. If the water is choppy the rips will blend in, making them impossible to see. At these times, watch for a sudden rise or drop in depth on your recorder. Chances are you will find fluke here. The second situation that makes location difficult is slack water. When the tide stops running, the rips disappear. There's nothing you can do when this happens because the fluke stop feeding. The rips vanish for about an hour, so either switch to porgy fishing or troll for blues and bass until the current starts running again and the rips reappear.

Once you have located a rip you can start making your drifts. As I have said, the fluke lie in a narrow zone, so short drifts are in order. Run about fifty yards up-current of the rip and turn off your engine. Give the boat a minute or so to straighten out before lowering your rig to the bottom. When your sinker touches bottom strip out another five or six feet of line and stop.

Your boat will drift through the rips at a small angle. Because of this fact, you will cross the rips at a different point on each drift. This makes it easy to locate a pocket of fish, but has one drawback. Once you have found the fish, there is nothing to take a bearing on so that you can make more than one pass at the spot. The proper use of a marker buoy eliminates this problem and will considerably increase your catch. For instructions on how to make and use marker buoys, see "Making Your Own Marker Buoys," L.I.F. Volume 9, No.45.

I prefer spinning rather than conventional tackle for fishing the rips. I use a seven or seven-and-a-half foot spinning rod with a fast taper. These rods have a sensitive tip with which to feel the fluke's soft pick-up, while at the same time they provide the necessary backbone to persuade a large doormat to give up the bottom. I have found two rods that meet these requirements: the 7' Garcia Conolon 2115A Heavy Action and the 7½' Fenwick PLS 75. Match one of these with a quality medium-sized spinning reel loaded with ten or twelve pound test monofilament and you're in business.

Rigging for Cod

by Capt. Carl G. Forsberg (Deceased)

Capt. Carl G. Forsberg passed away last year. Capt. Forsberg was the first skipper to discover the fantastic codfishing at Cox's Ledge and fished it with his Viking Fleet for many years until his retirement. This article was written some time ago, but its valuable information to codfishermen is still timely.

There are now several other boats out of Montauk fishing Cox's Ledge during the summer months, including the Viking Star, Peconic Queen II and the Hel-Cat.

Voice of Experience

It is very discouraging to the captain of a party fishing vessel when his patrons ignore the advice freely offered to them for their own good and most satisfactory results and enjoyment. The skipper is using the knowledge gained by his experience and know-how in this particular area, along with all the modern electronic equipment and devices on the market and within his means to be able to afford. He has done his very best to put his passengers over the most numerous, largest and most ignorant fish that he can locate.

After the ship is securely anchored over the grounds the skipper will go down on "deck" and observe the results. Every time he sees folks using the wrong rigging and tactics he cheerfully (but sometimes necessarily and naturally, irritably) advises those who will listen, even going as far as to re-rig many of the lines himself. However, there are always those who know better. "I have fished before," is the frequent remark. They go out a few times a year to different places, yet they think they know more about the racket than a man who has done it every day for many years in the same general areas.

Well—in order not to cause resentment and hard feelings—the captain and crew lets it go at that. But those paying customers who spend the best couple of hours with wrong rigs or bait tactics waste the best few hours in the beginning of the day, when they should be getting good fishing results. Later on, most of the people will have compared catches and results with other people on board. Then they alter the rigs that should have been taken care of before, but now it's too late. No matter how diligent you are about the rigs, bait, etc., when the fish stop feeding and quit biting, you cannot catch them. This is just common sense.

Rigging Up

Methods for catching cod must be according to the season of the year. In the summer, off Montauk, Block Island and Cox's Ledge areas (after the winter dogfish have taken off), from the west traveling east, baits should be rigged off the bottom. The lower hook should be tied into the line 18 to 20 inches above the sinker so that bait will hang at least 6 inches above bottom knot. The upper hook 3 to 4 feet above the bottom one. A baited hook dragging on bottom in summer will invariably catch a trash fish, hacklehead, conger eel or something worse. It is not sensible to waste time and effort reeling in a junk fish up through over 100 feet of water when you may just as well have reeled in a nice cod or pollock.

Cod in the summer season are on vacation—just relaxing, romancing, and enjoying themselves over the best bottom and feeding grounds that they can find. They do not need a lot of energy or nourishment as they are not migrating, spawning or going any place. Just living it up. Therefore, a small bait off the bottom is best. It always seemed to me that there are about 100 cod in the area to every one that will bite in the summertime on the mussel-covered rocky ground in the Montauk-Block Island Sound area. This does not apply to the fishing over wrecks. This belief is according to our observations via our depth recorders and other electronic equipment, and by the reports of the SCUBA divers which we have diving on the grounds, carefully observing the habits of the cod, haddock and pollock.

Baiting Up

In regard to bait, the skimmer clam (surf clam) is the bait that nearly all fishermen expect to find on a party boat, and always do. However, a cod will eat just about everything that will afford him nourishment: Lobster, crabs, squid, other fish, herring, whiting, and others. I have never found a young cod in the stomach of a codfish; apparently they do not eat their own kind!

The divers say that they are very friendly and curious. Many times it has been necessary to push them away, or try to scare them in order that the divers can see what they are doing down there. They have observed how a big cod acts when he is first hooked. A fish has no feelings as we have, but they know when the hook is set; they are suddenly terrorized when they have their heads jerked up a few times after the hook is in. As soon as a cod finds that there is something seriously the matter with him, and as he is being rudely hauled to the surface from the safer and dark depths, he turns over, belly up, and fights to get back to the bottom. This sometimes throws the hook, or, if he is lightly lipped, the hook sometimes comes free. Mr. Cod then loses no time diving to the bottom, before a shark chops off his body just behind the ears.

A skimmer clam body, cut in half so that the stomach or soft part is a part of this portion of bait, is the best. The snood or mouth of the clam, with the two lip strings attached, is another bait that may be used. Hook the mouth or snood once and allow the lip strings to trail for very good pollock bait. Hook the hard tongue once or twice, no more. This makes the bait look more natural, tasty and attractive to fish.

Do not knit the bait on the hook so it is all crinkled up. In this way it looks, to the fish, that the poor clam has some horrible, painful ailment. Most cod never saw a bare, naked clam in their lives (no shell around it). They have been rooting in the sand all their lives for them. It is necessary for him to taste the bait a few times, or suck on it and come to the conclusion that this clam is a reality and not a dream or miracle.

The cut stomach portion gives off a very appetizing, irresistible perfume to the cod. An uncut or whole clam will not give off this savory fragrance and you will lose this advantage. Two or three pieces of bait on a hook is a great disadvantage. This glob will often come out of the fish's mouth when you try to set the hook; the point only scratches the roof of his pallet. This makes the cod very indignant, to say the least. He has had his free lunch taken away and has a "toothache" in the bargain. Many times you will find that the soft part of the bait is nibbled off and only the bare gistle or tongue remains when you reel in to examine it. This plainly indicates that the fish are just picking and taking only the tasty part of the bait.

Cox's Ledge Formation

Block Island Banks, Cartwright Banks—all are part of the Cox's Ledge formation which is covered with sea mussels clinging to the black rocks, along with many species of marine life. Occasionally a mussel is brought up on a line or hook. Open up this bivalve and carefully put the meat on your hook. This is the codfish's Ice Cream Delight and will catch a cod or pollock first-est and soon-est. The only bait comparable to this is scungilli or conch. These large snails are natural food as are the common round conches that are always sought by large cod and winter fishermen when the bergalls or cunners are active and taking bait off as soon as it arrives at the bottom. This situation exists mostly in the cold months of winter.

In summer the bergalls are like the cod—on vacation and spending their time in romancing and enjoying themselves—and are not so ferocious. The round conches mentioned are very good chum for cod. Break them by slamming them down on a heavy board or crush them with a wood mallet, then toss them overboard when you are fishing. Wait, have a beer or coke and relax with the baited lines on the bottom until the fish are attracted by the irresistible aroma of the conches exuding their juices to the enticement of the cod and your successful hauling in of same.

The conch are pounded soft, the shells and the very hard, concrete-like part of the meat is tossed over the side to attract cod, and the remaining flesh cut into strips about 1/2 inch wide and long as the conch meat. This is the bait. In a tide flow, hook a strip of conch once only at the end. Do not try to conceal the hook within the tough meat of the conch! Hook through the end and let the hook show. To bury the hook into the tough meat of the conch is like putting a leather sheath over a hook. A cod never saw a hook before in its life, so why try to hide it?

The only other bait that I know of that is comparable to mussels or conch properly handled is sea scallop guts, and these can be obtained from the commercial scallopers in fall and winter. The bay scallops, much smaller than sea scallops, have smaller insides. This material must be picked out from among the shells soon after they are opened. Sea scallop guts are hard to come by as the large offshore scallopers throw guts and all overboard with the shells after the meat is removed. I have obtained a couple of bushels of sea scallops from the scallopers during the war years while on Navy patrol. We would fish with this, on or near Cox's or any rough bottom in the proper depth, and have more than enough cod and pollock in a very short time to feed the whole crew, officers and all.

Hook Size Important

Down through the generations of fishermen there has never been a better hook for cod in the waters from New Jersey's Cape May to Nantucket, Massachusetts than the 6/0 Sproat. There are times when we use 7/0 for party fishing, but only when the big cod are in the majority. We rigged our set lines one year using 6/0 and 7/0 Sproat, as we were fishing Block Island Banks and catching nearly all large cod, but soon had to change the whole gear to 6/0 hooks, as this size outfished the 7/0 two-to-one. This is quite a job in gear of over 3,000 hooks, but we had to do it. We did learn something, though (several old-timers told us the 7/0 hooks would not work, but we knew better). We have caught cod over 70 pounds on 6/0 hooks.

Monofilament Best

In regard to line: Monofilament is the greatest advance in deep sea fishing in history. It will not rot, is strong for its diameter, flexible and just about invisible in the water. It takes less lead to sink it and it pulls through the water so smoothly that you are almost able to feel when a fish just thinks about biting. Monofilament is not affected so much by the tide as linen lines were, and when used trolling there is much less drag.

However, it is deadly to the rubber shaft bearings ahead of the propellers. Anglers, who are too impatient to wait until the captain blows the signal to drop lines, often have their lines wound up in the wheel and around the shaft and broken off. The mono works itself along the shaft and into the bearing, ruining bearing and grooving shaft. Very expensive. Bearings cost over $100 each and shaft repair can run several hundred dollars. Divers tells us that the entanglement of lost mono over and around a wreck that has been fished for a while is a deadly trap for fish. They become entangled and gilled, also hooked on the lost hooks, and perish there. So every advantage has its disadvantage.

Cod and pollock are nearly always found over rough bottom or wrecks, reefs, and ledges. Sinker loss is common. The running line will nearly always break at the knot where one of the two hooks is tied, provided you do not foolishly bend it over or around the rail of the boat to break it out or tear it free. In this case it will nearly always part at the boat rail and you lose over 100 feet of line. Also, this lost line adds to the entanglement on the bottom and, when the web of lost line becomes dense or thick, enough fish go elsewhere.

Loose lobster are very vulnerable to the mono tangle. They are naturally all-around and in-and-out of a wreck. The points on their shells are easily entangled in the mono and they very soon die. When the running or main line is pulled upon in order to free the gear from the bottom, care must be taken not to cut your hands on the tight line. Use gloves or wrap line 'round and 'round your forearm, over your coat sleeve, and pull until the line breaks or the sinker is torn out from the wreckage.

Lighter Snelled Hooks

You will save yourself a lot of gear and many times land the pool fish if you will just take the trouble to do the following: When you use 40 or 50 pound test line on your reel, be sure to use hooks which are tied with 25 or 30 pound test monofilament snells. Hook snells should be 15 to 18 inches in length. When the hook is fast in a piece of bottom, the 30 pound hook snell will always break before the main line, and you will recover the sinker and other hook.

Now, should you have a fish on the top hook, with the bottom hook fast in the bottom, the bottom hook snell will break and you will get the fish and in most cases the sinker also. This fish may sometimes be the prize winner. So for your own pleasure, satisfaction and enjoyment, it will pay you to take the trouble and care to rig sensibly and properly.

In regard to the made-up rigs purchased at fishing tackle counters, be wary! Hooks ready rigged with snells of 50 and 60 pound stiff mono will not fish as well as hooks tied with 30 pound. The heavy stuff is too stiff and the bait will not work naturally in the water, as it will with the lighter and more limber leader.

Best Side of Boat When Drifting

Here is a way that you will have a great advantage over other fishermen on a party boat, providing that you have the skill and understanding. The skill may be obtained by you in your back yard or in any open space or field, if you are ardent and determined enough to practice.

Much of the fishing for cod and pollock is done while drifting. We all know that the most natural policy is to be on the side of the boat the lines are free of. That is, the lines are out from the boat and not under it. Everybody is happier this way, but the intelligent fisherman who knows what he is doing, and has the ability, will always fish on the leeward-side of the boat and cast ahead of the drift. The casting does not have to be overhead; this is prohibited on nearly all party boats as it is too dangerous and cod do not bite very well on ears and noses. All party boat captains are very expert in removing hooks from people, however, we do not like to have to do it. If a hook is through an ear or nose there is nothing to it: just clip the ring off and pull the hook through. But when the barbed hook is buried in the flesh, and the point has come through—here is a problem for the captain.

There is only one way to get a fish hook out except via surgery. That is to push it through. First clip the eye off with a good sharp pliers, then give the victim a couple of double shots of good booze. This makes the procedure much more painless for the victim. The captain can then go about his business of seeking the most ignorant fish to get the most intelligent people over.

If a captain can get intelligent people over ignorant fish, he is made. But if he gets intelligent people over intelligent fish, it's a stalemate. The only worse thing than this is to have ignorant people fishing over intelligent fish; then the poor captain is a real heel.

However, to get back to the deadly method of winning the boat pool via casting ahead of the drift. The best rig I have ever found for this is as follows: Tie a 4- or 6-ounce diamond jig to the end of your line. This jig should have a three-prong hook on it (most jigs have). Now tie a regular codfish hook up the line a distance so that the hook will be about 4 or 5 inches up from the front end of the jig when the snell of the hook is pulled down along the running line. Do not put bait on the jig, but put a strip of squid on the hook above. The squid is hooked only once through the end.

The squid strip should be about ½ inch wide and about 3 to 4 inches long. Squid is no good for bait unless it is pounded with a steak mallet, but should be pounded tenderly, just so it is very limber and flexible. This is something that was only known among commercial hand liners. Party boat operators cannot go into this detail as it involves too much labor and attention. There isn't time. We just do the best we can with what we have and the time to do it in.

Now we have the jig on the end of the monofilament line with the hook tied at the proper elevation above. A jig is a representation of a fish, to the fish you wish to catch. That is the reason I think that the fish bite on it. The bait on the hook above the jig is the one that will catch 9 out of 10 fish on this system. The bait that you have on the hook that is rigged just ahead of the jig is the deadly one that will catch the fish.

The bow position is the best for the experienced fisherman. Cast underhand, not overhead, into the wind as far as possible away from the boat in approximately the 125 feet of water that we have at Cox's Ledge or on the Block Island Banks. By the time that your baited hook gets to the bottom where the fish are the line will be off from the boat at an angle of about 45 degrees. Reel until you feel the weight of the jig, then lift it off the bottom in slow jerks, recovering line on your reel as the boat drifts toward where your baited rig has arrived at the bottom. You will find in most cases before your line is vertical (up and down) you will have a fish on. If you do not, there may not have been any fish in the sight of your jig and bait, so pull up and try again.

By casting ahead of the drift, you are fishing with your baited hook in and around the fish that have not as yet been influenced by a number of baits being dragged through them. In other words, you have your baited hook in green, hungry, ignorant fish and you will get the biggest fish first.

When you pull slowly on the line with a long jigging motion, the baited hook rigged ahead of the jig is jerked along just in front of it. This is the hook that will get the fish nearly all the time. The only way I can figure this one is that the cod sees this bait trailing ahead of the jig and he naturally thinks that the jig is another fish trying to get this bait and eat it. Mr. Cod wants to get that bait first. It works so well that I have many times felt sorry for the fish, and have also had sympathy for the others in the boat pool that are all contributing to the amount of money that will be won, in most cases, by a skilled sharpshooter who knows what he is doing.

Of course, there is a large element of luck in getting the largest fish. Many times we have the prize fish caught by some person who has never fished before, or by a little boy or girl. One of the reasons for this happening, outside of the element of luck, is that these people pay strict attention to the advice and freely gain the help of the captain and crew in regard to tackle, bait and tactics. They realize that they know nothing about it and rely on us.

We are out here every day doing the same thing. It is the very security and success of every party boat owner or operator in the business that his customers obtain consistent results and have a pleasant day's recreation. When they do, they have something to bring home. They tell friends about their experiences and come out again and bring others with them. This is the way the party boat business following is built up, by regular patrons' repeat business.

Regarding hook holders (so-called cod rigs, etc.), stay away from this jewelry. This junk selling for high price is a problem to use. In most cases the hook holders are too close together so two hooks will tangle with each other; the distance from the sinker holder to the bottom hook is not far enough. The bright brass and jeweled beads, the right angle horizontals and perpendiculars of twisted wire, is enough to scare even an almost blind cod away from the bait held with trash like this. Also, your chances of tangling on the bottom are greater and when you get in a tangle with other fishermen—get a sharp knife, a razor blade or anything that will cut. Even a metal safety pin attachment to hold the sinker is no good.

Just tie, with a common overhand knot, a loop in the mono line. Loop about 4 inches long—pass end of loop through hole in sinker and drop sinker through loop. Then go up about 2 feet above sinker and tie another loop about 2 or 3 inches long, pass end of loop through small loop in hook snell, pass hook through loop in line and pull tight.

Top hook should be attached the same way, just a little more distance away from where the bottom hook is tied than the length of two hooks and leaders. This makes it almost impossible for the two hooks to get married together or tangled with each other.

Bait both hooks with one piece of "tasty bait" on each hook and drop them down to the bottom. Your hooks are separated so they will not tangle together. The bottom hook will catch the cod searching near the bottom, at the same time being high enough to be above the conger and hackleheads. The top hook will fish for the playboy cod that are just cruising around or chasing girls. Also, if there are any pollock around, they nearly always take the top hook. When there are winter dogfish around (the horned ones), it is better policy to use only one bottom hook tied just above the sinker. You will catch more cod and less dogs. Dogs almost always go for the high hook.

Dead Bait

There is another fact that is very important, but which is not usually taken advantage of on a party boat. That is: You will catch many more cod if you use bait that is more dead than alive. When a skimmer clam is opened alive and the meat is cut through to make two baits from one clam, the halves will stay alive for several hours. When you stick the hook into the meat and the clam crinkles up and shows life, this bait will not produce the results that it would if the clam halves had been allowed to die. An old time cod fisherman told me this a long time ago. I ignored it at the time, thinking there was no more attractive bait for a fish than a fresh clam, but found out later that this old-timer knew from long experience what he was talking about.

We found that if we baited our lines with fresh clams and put them overboard that way, we would not even have half the results we would have had, had the lines been baited the day before and the baits allowed to die on the hooks. So dead bait is the best.

THE RIPS OF MONTAUK

When a fluke spots your strip bait gliding silently over the bottom he will come over, grab it on the end and hold it in his mouth. You will detect this as a sudden weight and lack of movement. If you were to strike at this moment you would succeed in merely pulling the bait out of the fluke's mouth. If, on the other hand, you were to simply wait, the boat will put tension on your line as it continues to drift. The fluke will feel this unnatural resistance and open his mouth, letting the bait go. So what do you do? Let your bait "drop back."

As soon as the boat enters the rip, prepare for a pick-up by opening your bail and holding the line over the index finger of the hand holding your rod. When you feel the pick-up of a fluke, release the line from your finger and feed out line as the boat drifts. This allows your bait to "drop-back" behind the boat, thus taking all resistance off your line. The fluke will then start chewing his way up your bait towards the hook.

Give the fluke ten or 15 seconds to reach the hook before closing the reel bail. Reel in any slack line, then slowly raise the tip of your rod until you feel the weight of the fish and strike hard. More often than not the fluke will let go of your bait as soon as he feels resistance. If this happens, open your bail and start the procedure over again.

Because of the habit these fluke have of just holding the strip bait in their mouths and refusing to swallow it, I have devised a special rig that has produced fantastic results. I call it a "tandem hook fluke rig." It consists of two hooks, a 3/0 and 5/0 beak, attached to the same snell about three inches apart. The top hook is the smaller 3/0 and the bottom hook is the 5/0. The 5/0 is the "stinger," and it is on this hook that you will catch many of the short-biting fluke that would normally get away. With a little practice this tandem hook rig is easy, as well as inexpensive, to make.

Purchase 5/0 gold beak hooks with 36" snells and some unsnelled 3/0 gold beak hooks. Do not get the bait-holder type hooks. Tie a figure-8 knot in the leader about two inches above the 5/0 hook, but don't pull it tight. Then clip off the end loop of the leader and thread a 3/0 hook on and slide it down to the figure-8 knot.

Pass the point of the 3/0 hook through the top and bottom loop of the "8" (see diagram) and pass the knot over the bend of the hook onto the shank. To tighten, grasp the 5/0 hook at the bend with a pair of pliers and slowly pull on the end of the leader. When the knot has tightened, slide it up the shank of the 3/0 hook until it rests under the eye. Both hooks should point in the same direction, as they appear in the diagram. Attach the leader to a 3-way swivel about 6 inches above your sinker and you're ready to go.

This tandem hook arrangement is used with long strip baits. We only purchased one large trolling squid for a dollar when we went on vacation last year. We cut this into strips, caught a few fluke, and made strip baits out of these.

A more deadly bait does not exist for doormat fluke than a strip of fluke itself. Filet a fluke in the normal fashion and cut strips 7 or 8 inches long and about one inch wide at one end, tapering to a point at the other. Put the 3/0 hook in the wide end, about one-half inch from the top. The 5/0 hook is hooked into the bait wherever it falls, being certain not to bunch the bait up. (See diagram.) When held up by the leader, the strip bait should be straight and look natural. Alternate baits that work well, but with less success, are squid, mackerel and sea robin.

The last necessary item for a successful day of fishing the rips for fluke is a large landing net. Don't even think of lifting these babies into the boat. Get the largest fluke net you can handle and keep it where you can get it in a hurry. When netting a fluke, put the net in the water and bring the fish to it, head first.

After you have netted a fish and have him in the boat, give him a good clout on the head with a billy to quiet him down a little before attempting to remove the hook and extracting him from the net. Trying to remove a hook from a wildly thrashing fluke is a good way to be the hookee. The tandem hook fluke rig can also double as a tandem-hook people rig... believe me, I know...

MONTAUK HISTORY BY FRED GUARDINEER

ONE OF THE FIRST BOATS TO DOCK AT MONTAUK IN THE 1600'S

MONTAUK WAS SETTLED IN 1639 BY PILGRIMS WHO WERE ESTABLISHED IN EAST HAMPTON AND SOUTHAMPTON. THE LIGHTHOUSE WAS ORDERED BUILT BY PRES. GEORGE WASHINGTON IN 1796.

MONTAUK LIGHTHOUSE IS THE PRINCIPLE ATTRACTION AT THE EASTERN TIP OF LONG ISLAND AND IS NOW A STATE PARK.

MONTAUK WAS USED MOSTLY AS A SUMMER GRAZING PASTURE FOR LIVESTOCK FEATURING CATTLE DRIVES ALONG THE BEACH UP UNTIL 1860 WHEN THE LAND WAS FENCED.

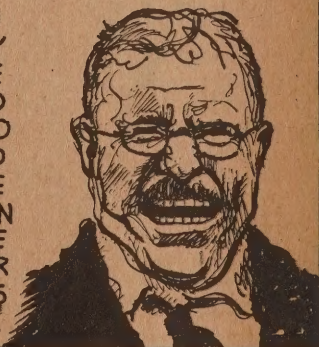

MONTAUK IN THE 1920'S WAS IN ITS RIP-ROARING PRIME WITH DAYTIME FISHING AND NIGHT-TIME RUMRUNNING. FISHERMEN COULD GO ON THE "NIGHT SHIFT" WHERE THE PAY WAS 10 DOLLARS AND A CASE OF LIQUOR FOR HELPING UNLOAD FIREWATER BROUGHT INTO THE DOCKS.

DITCH PLAINS

WAS WHERE TEDDY ROOSEVELT, THE ROUGHRIDERS AND THE ENTIRE 36,000 U.S. ARMY CAMPED IN 1898 AFTER THE SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR. THEY WERE QUARANTINED FOR SEVERAL MONTHS WITH MALARIA.

MONTAUK HARBOR IS NOW RENOWNED FOR ITS FISHING FLEET WITH MORE WORLD RECORDS THAN ANY OTHER PORT IN THE WORLD - 28.

SOUTH SHORE Fishing Report

MONTAUK

Ronnie at Gone Fishing Marina tells us the fluke are in good at the rips off The Point. Striped bass fishing is also good there for the knowledgeable angler. Shagwong Reef holds both blackfish and sea bass. Flounders of good size are in Montauk Lake itself. For you divers who are tired of jetty fishing see Ronnie and ask him where he gets those big striped bass and tell him L.I.F. sent you. He'll know what you want.

John Keller at Lake Montauk Marina reports fluke as large as six pounds are at the North Rips and the Midway buoy. Throwback are about one in five with good action. Striped bass are on both sides of The Point. Larry Keller, his son, on board the Jean III had a 44 pounder which took an umbrella rig at the Elbow. John says his slip customers are also getting bass and the blues are starting to show.

Capt. Howie Carroll of the Jigger III said the fluke fishing has been pretty good up until Sunday. There haven't been too many throwbacks while the fish averaged two or three pounds.

The charterboat Leatherneck has been fluke fishing the rips off the Point. Capt. Pike said they were catching striped bass off the Elbow and in the Pollack Rip. The striped bass are taking either jigs or tube lures. The bass run anywhere from schoolies to 40 pounds.

Capt. Mc Cann of the charterboat Hound Dog reports the bluefish are starting to come in. These fish are only the front runners and weigh about five pounds. The umbrella rig is the most effective set-up and is also picking up bass from schoolies on up to ten pounds.

On Sunday, Scott Simons of the L.I.F. staff and his buddy Frank, fished from their boat about 100 yards from the Lighthouse. A half hour of casting with a sinking Rebel and small Hopkins earned them eight bass. They were up to four pounds each.

Capt. Whitly Bateman of the charterboat Four Queens said it wasn't fantastic but they had enough of good sized bass from five to seven pounds with a couple of them over 20 pounds. They had quite a few bluefish on Saturday all of which went five or six pounds.

Slow bass fishing at the beginning of the week, said Dick Vigilant of the Triton II, but the weekend finished up with a bang. Friday saw the start of it with 32 striped bass, six of which were over 20 pounds. Bucktails jigged on wire line were the best. Fluke fishing was very good during the week.

The Marlin III had a lot of nice cod and pollock. Ed Gibstein of the Bronx had one cod of 42 pounds while Norman, also of the Bronx, took the pool with a 50 pounder. Ed also had another 15 cod between 15 to 25 pounds. All these fish came from Block Island. Pollock are being taken in sizes from five to 20 pounds.

Capt. Bud Dorman of the Viking Skipper said they have most of their fish by 10 A.M. and the catches are excellent. Block Island cod are plentiful and double headers of codfish from five to 12 pounds were numerous. The biggest fish was 32 pounds. Their first bluefish of the season was taken on Friday.

IN MONTAUK—LUNCH & DINNER • 7 DAYS A WEEK • Noon to 11 PM

Barbara Fitzpatrick, Lindenhurst, caught this 59½ lb. codfish on the Peconic Queen out of Montauk.

Jerry Ebner of the Farragut Striper Club caught this 28 lb. 2 oz. bass in Montauk fishing sandworms in the surf.

Both of the Hel-Cat boats fished Block Island. On Sunday the 1400 Rod and Gun Club chartered the Helen II where they made out fine. The Hel-Cat had a pool winner with a 42 pound cod. John Giloti from Long Island City was the lucky angler.

Capt. Paul Forsberg of the Viking Star says the fishing is fantastic at Cox's Ledge. Cod fish run from 15 to 60 pounds. Scott Ashley, an eleven-year-old boy, from Brooklyn brought in a 46 pound codfish which was nearly as big as he is. But he was not the winner. An anonymous angler won the pool with a codfish of over 50 pounds.

PROMISED LAND

Art Brand says the flounder are good there. Blackfishing is pretty good at Eastern Plains Point on Gardeners Island. Some sea bass are around of good size. Weakfish and blues are starting to pick up in Cheering Harbor. Fluke fishing is starting at Cartwright Island.

SAG HARBOR

Helen of the Noyac Marina reported big weakfish still around but bluefish are moving in. Danny Melis of Flynn's Fishing Club weighed in a 7-lb. bluefish on Saturday. Porgies are spotty between buoys 16 and 17. More and more fluke are being picked up, which is unusual for this area. Blowfish reported off Long Beach.

SHINNECOCK

"Fabulous fluke fishing," in the inlet, Shinnecock Canal and throughout the bay, reports Mickey at Altenkirch Tackle. Weaks are showing again in Peconic Bay, improved from the last few weeks. Bass and blues being trolled outside on tubes and umbrella rigs. Still good flounder fishing in the bay, but few are cashing in on them.

Definite improvement in fishing by both boats says Capt. Clark Bellows. Thursday saw this improvement in the porgy fishing. They are still catching weakfish but not in any great numbers. The school weaks are becoming more numerous. On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday they were fluke fishing in Shinnecock Bay in the morning. Peter Salerno of Hicksville had a nine and three quarter pound fluke weighed in at Altenkirch. When the tide is right they will fluke fish a few hours in the morning and the afternoon.

HAMPTON BAYS

Ernie of Bradley's Fishing Station said that there is good fluking in the East Channel near the inlet. Sand eels, spearing and squid are all producing. One boat drifting for fluke with spearing baits picked up three stripers to 6 pounds near the inlet. A few small bluefish are being taken in the cove right in front of Bradley's.

Tony's Fishing Station confirmed the good fluke fishing in East Channel when the wind gives you a good drift. Fishing has been holding steady for the past few weeks. Still good flounder catches by buoys 17 and 18.

MORICHES BAY

Nancy of Skidmore's Fishing Station reported lots of fluke are being caught drifting between the Coast Guard Radio Station and the dredge pipe on pontoons. Catches range from 5 to 25 fish per boat depending on the anglers. About half the fish are shorts and the keepers are between 15 and 18 inches. Nancy said the fluke are biting short, so have to let them chew on it a minute before setting the hook. Flounders are still good off buoy 32 on the north side in the mud. The larger boats are trolling blues and bass at the mouth of the inlet on lead core line with bucktails and porkrind.

Dick Asigian of Dick's Tackle Box said that fishing in the bay is general-quantities as before. Fluke fishing is increasing and is good drifting between buoys 28 and 30 and the flats off Brown's jetty. Blowfish are starting to come in along with some kingfish. The best tide seems to be the last of the outgoing.

CAPTREE

The Capt. Scotty has been doing alright weakfishing during the week. Most of the weaks are about four to six pounds. Fluke fishing on the weekends bring catches of anywhere from a couple of fish to 16, with them mostly in the keeper to three pounds. Capt. Richie is fluke fishing every day. Most of the fish are keepers with steady action. Pool fish goes to six pounds with an occasional weakfish or blue being caught.

Noel Kopauuff at the Captree Bait Station weighed in a 41 pound striped bass for Sal Cacavale of Deer Park. Sal took this fish at night using clams from Cedar Beach. He had several other fish and he and his friends lost several other big fish. Pier fishing is fair with flukes and weaks dropping off and blacks and bluefish picking up.

BABYLON

Charlie's Fishing Station reports plenty of weaks and fluke. The fluke are off the East-West Channel and are taking baited rigs of squid and sand eels. They are also in Fox Creek and the State Channel. The fluke are two or three pounds. Weakfish are taking a Salty Dog lure tipped with squid. The best tide is the incoming.

Jean Principe at Augie's Tackle said a lot of bluefish were caught outside of the inlet mostly by trolling. Five or six pounds were the average weight with a top of 11 pounds. A 48 pound striped bass was weighed in by Charles Ambrogio of the Diana III. It was caught on a trolled Lupo bunker spoon off the Sore Thumb. Glenn Tonner was plugging at night from the surf at the Cedar Beach Overlook and brought home a 14 pound bass. Some seaks and plenty of crabs at the Town Dock.

LINDENHURST

Duke's Tackle Shop reports good blue shark fishing offshore. Bay fishing, says Duke, has been less than fair for fluke and weaks.

AMITYVILLE

George Comb's Bait & Tackle called with a good report. A few anglers are catching weaks at the Bayview Ave. dock using line killies with a float. John Namoli clam chummed striped bass up to ten pounds in the State Channel at Tobay. weaks were caught in the West Gilgo Heading using shrimp chum. Fluke are good at the Wantagh bridges. Crabs are coming in at the docks. Ed Murphy of Seaford caught a 47 pounder on Thursday. He

WEST SAYVILLE

Dick Yonda at the American Sportsman said the blues are starting to run in the bay. A few two pounders were trolled on tubes at the Ocean Beach area. In this same area are fluke which are taking a hi-lo rig. Off the docks at West Sayville a few fluke are being caught on the hi-lo rig as well as a shrimp lure meant for a weakfish. The weaks are starting to scatter throughout the bay.

Sandy Powell at Oakdale Marina said the weakfishing is quieting down with fluke action taking its place. Buoys 3 and 4 which held the weaks are now doing the same with fluke. Bluefish are in the ocean for the trollers.

Dennis Masterson of South Bay Fishing Station said the weaks are still being caught but not in the great trolled a Capt. John Sekora single red tube #82 off Lido Beach where he took this fish.

Frank at Del's Fishing Station said Jim Braum had fluke to two and a half pounds east of the drawbridge. Bluefish are in the bay as evidenced by one angler having his reel stripped of line. Flounders are still around.

Lon Wanser Tackle reports flounder fishing is holding up well. Fluke fishing in the Jones Inlet on the outgoing tide is good. Weakies are at the third bridge and is best in the dark using sandworms.

WANTAGH

Causeway Tackle says the fluke fishing has been good. Blacks are at the bridges and piers. They are taking mussels and fiddler crabs.

N.Y. BIGHT Fishing Report

FREEPORT

The Starstream II did a fair job offshore on sea bass and pollack (up to 6 lbs.) all week. Some blues were picked up and starting this weekend, Capt. Richie will be out after the blue slammers, sailing at 6:30 A.M.

Capt. Paul "Spider" Schmidt of the Aloma II had 40 nice keeper fluke Sat. & Sun., for 30 lucky anglers, over 200 keeper fluke up to 4 lbs. came over the side. Spider will be starting for blues this weekend, 6:30 A.M.

Nick of Freeport Boatmen's Association called to say his charter boats have been doing great on fluke and flounder and some blues are being taken on fluke rigs. Jack Wolfert, while fluking on the open boat "Capt. Hall" on Saturday, took an 8 lb. blue, along with 20 fluke to 4 lbs. The Blue Fin also had a stray 8 lb. blue. Swift Creek a hot spot.

The open boat "Capt. Lou" has been doing a job on fluke and flounder, but will be concentrating on fluke exclusively now. It's been great in Jones Inlet, fish up to 3 lbs. and in quantity. "Capt. Al" reports very good fishing all week for sea bass and blacks. Then on Sunday, the blues moved in like an invading army. The blues chased all the sea bass and blacks, but more blues broke off than were boated, due to the relatively light tackle being used. Some were brought to gaff and a few ran to 15 lbs. Al is switching over to blues this weekend also.

Capt. Jordan Hall of the charter-

Bob Emmert took this 46 lb. 10 oz. bass on sandworm on the outgoing tide at the Meadowbrook Bridge. He had 7 other bass to 25 lbs.

boat "Dock One" had a 1-man charter out Saturday and got 3 large bass off Sandy Hook, along with some 5 & 6 lb. blues.

POINT LOOKOUT

Capt. Art White of the open boat "Angler II" is enjoying hot bluefishing S. of Cholera Banks. On Saturday, 13 fares had 80 blues, 10-12 lbs. Dennis Sweeney of N.Y.C. had a fish, 3 over 12 lbs. Art runs open every day.

L.I. Sea Clam has no details, but reports of bass being chummed at the local bridges.

Dave at Ed's Fishing Station says he's hitting the fluke regularly in Reynolds Channel and the inlet w/spearfishing. Flounder still at the Coast Guard Station.

ISLAND PARK

The "Commodore" has been enjoying good fluking off Riis Park, fish to 5 lbs., along with stray blues.

Charlie at Beckman's Tackle in Lynbrook reports the fluke fishing in Reynolds Channel slowed on the weekend, due probably, to the armada of boats on the hunt there. Fish there during the week, if possible, advises Charlie. Bass trolling productive on spoons and large tubes for the bass hounds, and productive bass chumming, when all is quiet, at the bridges.

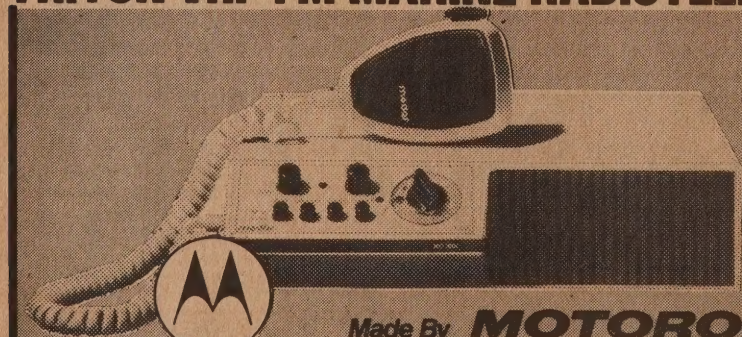

LONG BEACH

Tom at Long Beach Sports Marina reports very good fluke fishing, w/fish to 9 lbs. on spearing. An employee of Tom's got the 9 pounder, so collar him for the hot spot. A few weakies around. Stripers still being trolled on that red-hot Lupo spoon.

ATLANTIC BEACH

For the offshore bass hounds, Capt. Ron Lepper of the "Kim" called to inform us that day striper fishing fell off after Monday, badly. Some here and there, but poor in general, all over. Nights, however, were very good thru the week, due to the full moon and there being no phosphorus in the water. Ron did manage a fish a day, however. Thursday, due to no moon and some wind 4 members of the E. Rockaway Anglers took 13 stripers, 15-30 lbs. using line bunker, fishing with Ron. Saturday, 8 fish with stripes came over the side for Tom & Joanne Barbieri, off Sandy Hook. 4 bass were also taken off Long Beach in "the middle of town", 20-30 lb. class.

Leon at Henning's Fishing Station says fluke in Reynolds Channel very good weekdays, falling off on the weekends due to the unbelievable boat traffic. Good weekend fluking off Riis Park and Playland. Eels at Duck Pt. A few blacks at the bridge. George Bell of Cedarhurst was fluking Saturday at the ER Buoy and was pleased, to put it mildly, to reel in a 36½ lb. striper. 5-8 lb. schoolie bass chummed at bridge.

SHEEPSHEAD BAY

Mike's Bait & Tackle reports that private and charter boats are taking excellent bass catches bunker dunking and trolling spoons around Sandy Hook and the Golf Ball. Big catches on Saturday, 10-15 per boat in the 20-35 lb. range. Wednesday bass were taken more locally on wire and buck-tails. Scattered blues.

The Amberjack IV is bluefishing as are several other of the boats and are having fair-good catches. Bottom fishing for sea bass and blacks is very good. Charlie Patterson of Williamsburg took a 4½ lb. porgy on the Jetts. Some fluking along the Rockaways on squid/sand eel combos.

Neil at Stella Maris tells of plenty of stripers off the Golf Ball. Joe & Arnie Bagel on Saturday, had 18 bass up to 25 lbs. on whole, live bunker. Schoolies are falling for umbrellas. Two bleary eyed anglers weighed in an 18 and 23 lb. bass taken off Sandy Hook on the 3 oz. red Lupo baitfish.

JAMAICA BAY

Channel Rod & Gun reports good fluking between South Channel Bridge and the trestle on spearing/squid combo baits, along with some night bass action.

John at Cross Bay Rod & Gun reports good fluke and black fishing at S. Channel Bridge & Long Beach Bridge. Sand porgies as well. Try Marine Pkwy. Bridge for flounder. Crabs off N. & S. Channel Br. Rock-away Pt. Jetty for striped bass on pork rind tipped bucktails and on the bottom with sand worms. Schoolies at the J.F.K. piers and S. Channel bridges on drifted worms, eves. & nites.

North Shore

STATEN ISLAND

Santo's Sport Shop said that bass are very good at Great Kills Pk. Fish up to 13 lbs. in late afternoon and evenings on worms from the beach. The weekend's boat traffic slowed things, however Annadale Beach is hot now for blues from beach and boat. Weakas are slow. Fluke very good and will get even better. Try Great Kills Park using the usual baits.

A 54½ lb. striped was taken by Ralph Santora while trolling a big Creek Chub plug. Plenty of blues around, between Hoffman Island and Verazano Bridge.

NORTH SHORE Fishing Report

GREENPORT

Art White of the A.P. White Bait Shop said the fishing was a little slow over the weekend. Some boats caught fish while others were a little slow. Weakfish are in Deering Harbor and are taking shrimp lures and squid. Blackfishing in the Sound is very good. Jim Price of Greenport had a nine pound weakfish that took a piece of squid around Greenport.

SOUTHOLD

Pete Liblien of Port of Egypt said the fishing was terrific. Weakas and porgies were picked up on squid, worms and clams. Buoys 14, 17 & 18 are the best spots. No bonanza like early May, but respectful catches of weaks. Porgy catches are from 30 on up. A surprise catch was fluke which are taking spinner rigs and squid strip at Beixedon. Blue fish are in fairly good at Bunker City and run two to three pounds. They are being caught on umbrella rigs.

NEW SUFFOLK

Good weakfishing again said Capt. Marty's Fishing Station. The shoals have smaller three and four pound fish and are south of buoy 23. Use squid on an incoming tide for best results. Porgies are west of Robins Island and buoy 25. Worm and clams are the best four pounds. Blackfish are running between six and 11 pounds for the pool winners. Sea bass are running well with catches up to four and a half pounds. The Rambling Anglers of New Hyde Park were on board Saturday when Frank Schaver won the pool with a seven pound black. On Sunday the Vinyalux Corp. was aboard and John Mulrooney was pool winner with a six pound black.

Dick at Plaza Sport said the fishing is generally good all around. A few blues came off the beach which were possibly caught by striped bass fishermen. The stripers are taking drifted worms. At Conscience Bay and the back part of Mount Sinai Harbor. These fish go to six pounds. Blackfish and porgies are plentiful off Miller Place and Rocky Point. One of Dick's assistants who dives said there are many blackfish in that area that go well over ten pounds. Weakfishing has slowed somewhat in Port Jeff. Harbor.

SMITHTOWN BAY

John Bishop of Smithtown Sports Shop caught weakfish up to seven pounds drifting mussels off the Mansion. Blackfish of six and seven pounds are taking mussels about a mile off Crane's Neck. This is slow fishing but they are big. The last buoy at the mouth of the Nissequogue River has some small stripers which are taking drifted worms.

NORTHPORT

Van at the Chain Locker said the weaks are spotty. Bunker are coming in. Striped bass are being trolled off Sand City and towards Centerport using bucktails. The casters off Centerport are using popping plugs. Both methods are picking up five-pound bass. Porgies and blacks are at Sand City also.

HUNTINGTON

Pete Novellino of the trailed charter-boat Jennie III fished Eaton's Neck where the blacks were plentiful on Sunday. Saturday's charter was for fluke, a few of which were caught at Squaw Island on the south shore.

Don Constantine of the Eveready Fleet reports good blackfishing off Eaton's Neck. The fishing in the buoys have dropped off. Al Rindelman of Commack was a pool winner with a ten-pound black.

COLD SPRING HARBOR

Veteran's Fishing Station reports good black and porgy fishing where the deep water of the Sound meets the bay. Weakfishing has declined but with bunker moving in, the striped bass has taken on a new meaning. A 30 and a 40 pound striped bass were taken off Whitewood Point on bunker strips.

BAYVILLE

Bob Strecker at Bayville Hardware said there is good striped bass activity off Bayville Beach. A 53 pound bass came out of there last Sunday and worm fishermen are taking school sized stripers regularly. No word on porgies as yet, but blacks are taken from the rocks by the beach-bound angler.

GLEN COVE

John Cacciola of Glen Cove Sports Shop says there are plenty of striped bass out there and some of them are pretty big. They range from the high forties down to schoolies. Chuck Cunningham fished the Glen Cove shoreline with cut mackerel and came up with two bass. One was over 25 pounds and the other well into the forties. The fish just love cut bait and outgoing tides. Then you can troll the upcoming tide. On the flood and at slack water Gibbs poppers are making the bass jump for them. You name the time and striped bass can be had.

PORT WASHINGTON

Moreland's Bait & Tackle reports striped bass being taken on worms or by plugging at all the points. Blackfish are at most rocky areas while porgies are at Execution Rock. Rocky says, although weakfishing has dropped off in the daytime, you should try drifting worms at night near a full tide.

CITY ISLAND

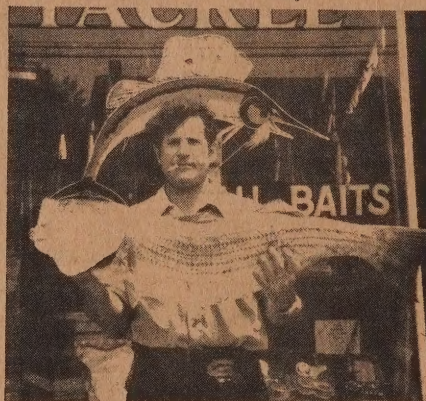

Rosenberger's Boathouse reports the blackfish are all over the area at all the rocky islands. They are taking mostly fiddlers and green crabs. Some porgies are showing but not strong yet. Striped bass are still to be had but you must work for them.

Jack's Bait & Tackle reports blacks are in good and solid. You can fish most rocky areas and find blackfish to catch. These blacks have a preference for fiddlers. Striped bass do not have too many anglers going after them, but they are there for the persistent one.

The Apache III, North Star and Theresa L all are fishing on the south side of the Sound where plenty blackfish and better than good porgy fishing is to be had. Some weakfish have also been taken aboard these boats.

NEW ROCHELLE

The Klondike V has been doing well on blacks and weaks and is now heavy into porgies. Saturday 25/75 per man was the order of the day.

NEW JERSEY Fishing Report

SANDY HOOK

The Chum Box reported a lot of smaller 10-25 lb. stripers hitting on bunker spoons and live bunker. Many 2-3 pound bass are taking worms in the surf. Bruce Ruppel was among the weigh-ins with stripers to 25 pounds. Bluefish are mixed in.

SEA BRIGHT

Giglio's reported a slowdown in surf action because of the sloppy water and weather, but this should pick up again by mid-week. There are a lot of fluke and bass in the rivers.

CONNECTICUT SCENE

NEW ROCHELLE

Comeron's Boats reports good bass fishing. One angler brought in an 18 pounder one day and 2 15-pounders the next, taken on sandworms and spinner combo.

MAMARONECK

Several good bass have been weighed in taken on cut mackerel. Largest a 28 pounder. Blacks are fantastic, porgies good, eels all over.

GREENWICH

Sportsmen's Den reports excellent fishing for weaks & bass. Weaks run to 3½, stripers to 10. Try Captain's Island.

STAMFORD

Pat's Marina says fishing is "wonderful". To back this up we were told of an 8 lb. weak, 10 lb. bass, 8 lb. black as average catches with daily improvements.

ROWAYTON

Bait Shop owner Bert Van Sciver racked up 8 bass (5-8 lbs.) on a single daybreak trip. Bass breaking everywhere slamming any lure around.

NORWALK

Mola Bros. tells of confirmed bluefish report just outside the Norwalk Islands. The fish were about 2½ lbs. Weaks off Tavern Island, stripers on bucktails around Norwalk Island.

The Tackle Box tells of bass from the Norwalk Islands 27-37 pounds. Cut bait is the answer. Weaks on worms, Salty Dog and mackerel chunks.

BRIDGEPORT

Ted's Bait reports weak from Pennfield Reef and Pleasure Beach. Schoolies are plentiful. Try St. Mary's. Plenty of porgies and blacks.

Cedar Creek Marine has had a few weaks and some good blackfish. Plenty of schoolies but mostly under-sized. Porgies everywhere.

STRATFORD

The Tackle Shack reports great blackfishing at Long Beach & Pleasure Beach. Most bass are schoolies with a couple of big ones mixed in. Weaks and fluke at the mouth of the Housatonic.

MILLFORD

Weaks and bass in the surf at Gulf Beach. Porgies are thick near buoy 12 averaging a pound or more.

NEW HAVEN

Weaks running 4-8 pounds at Savin Rock, Morningside, the Breakwaters and Branford. All of the bottom bass are good off the beaches at Savin Rock. Porgies everywhere and butterfish off the pier. Mackerel were last seen east of Faulkners Island. So goes the report from Outdoor Sports.

WESTPORT

Westport Tackle says the redfin has payed for many customers on bass. A 27 pounder taken on that lure backs up the report. Schoolies are plentiful. Mackerel chunks are also scoring. Weaks to 6 lbs. off Compo Beach.
